PLAN TO START WORK SOON ON NEW FIREHOUSE

Bonds Bought By San Francisco Firm

PLANS ARE ACCECTED

To Call For Bids Within Few Days

Work will be started on the new west-side fire house as soon as it is possible to call for bids and award the contract, it was stated this week by the members of the city council. The council at a special meeting Monday sold the bonds which were authorized by an election last month to Freeman, Smith & Camp of San Francisco. The bid of this firm was the highest offered, including a premium of $625. Other bids were received from Dean Witter and Co., R. H. Moulton and Co. and from the First National Bank of this city. The premiums offered in these bids were $609, $599 and $322.50, respectively.

Plans for the new structure were prepared by Russell & Duncan of this city, and by Fire Chief Mark Ryan. The plans call for a bungalow style building to cost approximately $16,000. Bids will be called for shortly and work will progress as rapidly as possible thereafter.

Damage Suit Filed Following Accident

Edward E. Brakesman of Los Angeles and the Frigidaire Corporation of which he is an employee were named as defendants in a $25,000 damage suit filed here this week by Mary Celentino, administratrix of the estate of Pedro Taitano. Taitano was killed in an automobile accident which occured at the intersection of Redwood avenue and the highway, when a car in which Taitano was riding and which was driven by Manual Rosorio of Daly City, collided with one driven by Brakesman.

Taitano was thrown out of the car and died from the results of the accident the complaint alleges. The complaint was filed by Maurice Dooling of San Francisco, attorney for the plaintiff.

Redwood Kiwanis Club Holds Closed Meeting

The weekly meeting of the Redwood City Kiwanis Club was held Wednesday at St. Peter's parish house. As the meeting occured on Memorial Day it was made a closed meeting with only the members being present. A talk by Rabbi Nieto of San Francisco was scheduled for this week, but this was postponed because of the meeting beng on Memorial Day, when many of the members were out of town.

Local Woman Granted Interlocutory Decree

An interlocutory decree of divorce was granted to Mrs. Grace Smith of this city Tuesday by Judge Buck. Mrs. Smith declared that her husband, Dr. James Franklin Smith, a physician of San Francisco, had deserted her. Dr. Smith denied this charge but did not contest the action for divorce.

The couple were married in Hollywood in 1917. A property settlement made in 1923 was confirmed by the court.

New Street Lights Being Installed

A crew of men has been at work this week installing the new electroliers along the block on Broadway between the railroad track and the highway. The electroliers are being installed in the place of the smaller type of street lights which are used in other parts of the business district.

The improved type of lights are being installed by the merchants along this block on Broadway. The lights of the new electroliers will be 1500 candle power instead of 250 candlepower as in the present system of lighting. The electroliers are being spaced fifty feet apart. In addition to installing new lights along this block a number of trees have been removed.

The merchants of this section of the city have given the electroliers which are being removed to the school district to be used around the new McKinley school. When completed the new installation will give this block of the business district a very much improved appearance.

Three Small Fires Call Out Department

The local fire department responded to three fire calls this week. The first was on Sunday, when the department answered a call to lnd a fire in the roof of a house on Willow street, near the highway. This was extinguished before much serious damage was done.

On Monday a grass fire was extinguished on Phelps streets and on Wednesday a fire which burned several hay bunches on the S. P. railroad roperty opposite Wellesley Park was put out.

Sequoia Hi-Y Club Elects New Officers

The Sequoia Hi-Y Club held its last meeting of the school year at the Congregational church Saturday evening. It was in the form of a business meeting with election of officers to serve during the fall semester.

Fred Kalenborn was elected president to succeed Arville White head who is graduating this year. Jack Johnson, who has been secretary during the past year, was elected vice-president. Clifford Woodhams, Jr., was elected secretary and Ed Williams wes re-elected treasurer.

A vote of thanks was given to all the ladies of the various churches who so kindly gave of their time in serving the dinners during the past year.

The new officers will hold a meeting early in August to evaluate the work of the past year and lay plans for the next semester's activity.

Lumber Yard Hearing Before City Council

A petition signed by nearly all o the business people of Redwood City, some 300 names in all was presented to the city council this week by E. W. Magruder. The petition was in favor of the retention by Magruder of his present lumber yard. Another petition opposing the lumber yard in its present site was presented by A. J. Stebenne, attorney for a number of residents who object to the lumber yard.

The case has recently been tried in the Supreme court, where the validity of the city's zoning law, which classes the site of the lumber yard as residential property was upheld. The board in executive session voted to stand by its original decision and order the lumber yard moved.

In the meantime Magruder is preparing to continue his fight to maintain his yard in the present location.

I. C. DRATHMAN GIVEN PRAISE FROM CAPITOL

REDWOOD OFFICER RATED HIGH BY STATE DEPT.

Scores Perfect Record In Preventing Spread Of Disease

(By Capitol News Bureau)

Speciol to Times-Gazette

Sacramento, May 30—Redwood City's health office scored a perfect record in preventing and reporting disease during 1927, winning a place on the state honor roll, it was announced today by Dr. Walter M. Dickie, director of the State Department of Public Health

Dr. Dickie esptcially praised the Redwood City health office for filing regular weekly reports of outbreaks with the state department, thereby aiding in halting the spread of disease.

The San Mateo County health officer, while not making the high record of the city department, due to monthly instead of weekly reports, forged into the second honor list.

San Mateo District Finds School Funds Still in Tangle

The tangle into which the school finances of the San Mateo and Burlingame high school districts found themselves recently and which resulted in the resignation of the board of trustees and dismissal of the supervising principal, is not yet settled. In order to raise funds for the school it will be necessary for a bond issue to be voted by the people of the district. This issue will be presented to the people on June 21.

Action on determning the date for the election and the amount was taken at a meeting of the board of trustees Monday night. The amount of the bonds will be $150,000.

At the same meeting of the board an answer was received from District Attorney Swart to some of the questions propounded to him by the board. The questions presented to the district attorney were in the form of a resolution passed by the board on May 17. They were:

1—Has a crime been committed by Frank H. Thrall?

2—Has a crime been committed by W. L. Glascock?

3—Can a cvil action be lawfully maintained against Frank H. Thrall to compel the repayment to this district of the amount of money or any part thereof by him received by reason of payment of said warrants so drawn to the order of H. & H. Hardware company.

4—Is there any civil liability imposed on W. L. Glascock by reason of his participation with Frank H. Thrall in the matter of said contract and warrants?

The first two questions Swart refused to answer stating that as district attorney it would be improper to alvise the board as to criminal or civil proceedure as his duties were limited to instructing the board in the duties in the conduct of their offices.

To the third question Swart replied that he believed that civil action might be instituted but only against those who actually handled the money involved. The matter was aid over to a future meeting of the board. In the mean time the banks of the district have refused to cash warrants for teachers of the schools involved.

Funeral Services Held For Little Colored Boy

Funeral services were held Wednesday for Theodore Thomas Russell, 3 months old son of Mr. and Mrs. Vergil Russell well known colored residents of Five Points. The little fellow died at the home of his parents Monday, following a short illness. Interment was in Union cemetery, following a service at the parlors of Layng and Tinney.

Invitations have been issued to an Epworth League party to be held at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Fisher on Arch street tomorrow evening. The party is being given to raise money for the institute club fund of the League. The admission will be 35c per person. Refreshments will be served.

A comittee apointed by the president, John Layng, is making preparations for a dinner dance to be given by the Redwood City Kiwanis Club next month. The occasion will be the annual zero hour which marks the opening of the Kiwanis International convention.

The Congregational Christian Endeavor Society of Redwood City was host to about fifty of the members of the Presbyterian Christian Endeavor of Palo Alto on Sunday evening. A joint meeting was held beginning at 6 o'clock. Miss Carol Carrington was the leader for the discussion of the topic "How Should I Go About Finding My Life Work." Special music was furnished by the local society. At the close of the meeting ice cream and cake were served.

June 9th has been set as the date for the annual dinner of the Sequoia Alumni Association. At this time the class of 1928 of the Sequoia Union High School will be welcomed as members of the association.

A dinner meeting is being panned by Redwood City Post No. 106 American Legion. Plans for the event are being perfected by the post commander, Dr. Robert C. Frazier. At this time members of the posts of Palo Alto, Mountain View and San Mateo will be present.

The Fraternal Aid Union will hold a card party in the Foresters Hall on Tuesday evening, June 12. Mrs. C. H. Locker is chairman of the committee in charge of the arrangements.

American Legion Gives Flags to Girl Scout Troops

The three troops of Girl Scouts of this district were each presented with a flag Wednesday, preceeding the Memorial Day services The presentation was made in front of the Central school on Broadway by Rev. E. H. Hamby.

One of the flags was purchased by Dr. R. C. Frazier and J. P. Hearne, members of Redwood City Post American Legion. The other two flags were purchased by proceeds from a card party given recently by the Legion members and by donations by Frank Thompson and R. R. Wilson, also members of the local post. The flags were received on the part of the Girl Scouts by Mrs. A. S. Kalenborn and were carried by the Girl Scouts in the parade which followed the Memorial Day service.

CITIZENS HONOR NATION'S HEROES ON MEMORIAL DAY

Patriotic Bodies Join In Memorial Day Service

MANY ENTER PARADE

Father C. E. Kennedy Is Main Speaker

The Sequoia Theatre was filled to capacity Wednesday when the annual Memorial Day Services were held. The memorial services were participated in by members of the Grand Army, the Spanish War Veterans, the American Legion, Boy Scouts, Girl Scouts. Women's Relief Corps, Auxiliary, Spanish War Veterans, American Legion Auxiliary, and by the school children.

The opening remarks were made by Post Commander Frazier of the local American Legion, followed by General Logan's General Orders by E. B. Hinman of the Spanish War Veterans. A prayer was given by Father Ryan followed by a song by the San Carlos school. Lincoln's Gettysburgh address was recited by Clement Collins and the Star-Spangled Banner was sung by Robert Glynn of Menlo Park. A reading by Mis Inez Jamieson was followed by a song by children of the grammar school.

Rev. C. E. Kennedy gave the memorial address. A song by the children of the convent, America by the audience and a benediction by Rev. E. H. Hamby concluded the program at the theatre.

The various organizations marched to the cemetery, where a short program consisting of a prayer by Rev. C. E. Winning, an address to the unknown dead by Rev. Hamby, and a reading by Miss Jamieson was given.

Work Begun Here On New Apartments

Ground was broken this week on a new apartment house being erected on the corner of Broadway and Birch street by the Misses Jean, Marion and Blanche Cummings. The building is being erected for the Misses Cummings by Gus Waller, well-known contractor of this city.

The building will cost in the neighborhood of $30,000 and will contain eight apartments of three rooms each. The plan of the buildings includes the latest modern conveniences, including a bath for each apartment. The structure will be two stories in height and will contain garages in the basement for the machines of the tenants.

The style of the building will be Spanish in type, and a comprehensive plan of gardening has been decidel upon to beautify the grounds. The new building will face the Methodist church and is across the street from the Sequoia Union High School.

Gus Waller, the contractor, is one of the best-known local building contractors. When making arrangements for the buiding the owners specified that the work must be done by one of the local builders. Arrangements for the building were made by the realty firm of Whitcomb anl Smith of this city, who have been active in interesting outside capital in the development of Redwood City.

TO RUSH WORK ON EXTENSION OF BROADWAY

No Protests Received On Proposed Plan of Assessment

PRELIMINARIES MADE

Improvement To Cost Less Than Expected

Monday evening marked the last day for filing obections to the proposed plan of assessment for opening Broadway east of Main street. No protests were filed with the city clerk. The date set for hearing protests, according to City Attorney ...ansfield, marks the last of the required preliminary proceedures necessary before beginning actual work on the construction of the street.

About two years ago the people of Redwood City voted $30,000 in bonds to pay one third of the estimated cost of the extension The other two-thirds or $60,000 was to be raised by an assessment district. This distrct was to be arranged n zones, the zones receiving the greatest benefit from the extension to pay the greatest proportion of the cost.

A committee consisting of B. Fox, L. A. Heiner and Walter ellogg was appointed by the board of trustees to work out a plan for zoning the assessment district and the plan as suggested by this committee was later accepted by the board.

When the committee had completed its work it was found that the total cost would be considerably under the estimated cost. In fact the total cost of the work is now set at $62,829.96 or more $27,000 under the first estimate.

The commitee found that nine pieces of property would have to be acquired. These were secured at an expense of $57,423. Deeds to all of these pieces are now in escrow and will be turned over to the town shortly after the first of June. An amount totaling $5,406.04 was used by the committee as incidental expenses, printing, engineering, stenography, searching titles, stationery and office rent.

The amount to be raised over the large assessment district s only $32,829.96: The greater part of the assments will be less than $5.00.

Eloping Couple Found In Oakland; Returned

Manuel Lopez, 21 a tractor driver and Theresa Galen, 16, of this city eloped Saturday to Oakland, and were arrested in that city Monday night. Officer Thorpe of this city brought the elopers back to Redwood City Tuesday, and Lopez now faces charges of contributing to the delinquency of a minor. He is being held on a warrant issued by Judge Buck.

Popular for Flavoring

Anise is grown chiefly for its aromatic seeds (fruits), which are used medicinally and also in baking and for flavoring confectionery. The oil distilled from the seeds is used medicinally in cordials and also for flavoring various beverages. Yields of anise seed are quite variable, since the plant is very sensitive to unfavorable weather conditions. In a good season from 400 to 600 pounds per acre may be reasonably expected

Form of Hibernation

The word hibernate carries the idea of winter. Such tropical creatures as alligators, snakes and certain mammals and insects undergo a period of torpor during the hot, dry season when food is scarce and vegetation is taking a rest. This is known as estivation.

YOUNGEST MARINE

Here is Leonard Louis Furman, just turned five and a full-fledged sergeant major of the United States marines, as you can tell by his official uniform, cap and everything, to say nothing of the stripes he wears upon his sleeve. The Sixth United States marines now on duty in China, where he was born, adopted Leonard as official regimental mascot. The little fellow is the son of Ensign and Mrs. George Furman, Salvation army missionaries who have just returned to Chicago central territorial headquarters on leave of absence after spending six and one-half years in the war-torn Orient.

CALIFORNIA NEWS BRIEFS

California's public schools cost her $143,819,224.15 last year. Reports to the state made by county superintendents show that kindergartens cost $3,605,842, elementary schools, $76,692,515.17, and high schools $63,520,863.62.

Sheriffs in California are not entitled to any profit from the sums allotted by the county for feeding prisoners in the county jails, according to an opinion rendered by Attorney General U. S. Webb to Elmer W. Heald, district attorney of Imperial county. Heald stated that Sheriff Gillett is allotted 20 cents per meal per prisoner and that a grand jury investigation found he was feeding the prisoners on a less sum.

A California barber must be an educated man, at least to the extent of an eighth grade schooling, R. L. Chamberlain, deputy attorney general, has informed the State Board of Barbers' Examiners. No barber "college" can be accredited which does not insist upon this prerequisite, nor can any barber from another state practice his trade without being thus qualified for his license. The board was also told barber shops must be partitioned off from other places of business, whatever their condition, before the law was passed.

The formation of an organization of Sacramento Valley landowners to confer with the state authorities on an equitable distribution of flood control costs between the landowners and the state was urged last week by Robert T. Devlin, attorney for a number of reclamation districts and prominently identified for years with flood control matters. Pointing out that the federal government is now ready to do its share through the adoption of legislation increasing its contribution to Sacramento river flood control works from $5,600,000 to $17,600,000. Devlin declared the state should now do its share by paying the entire cost of flood control.

Relief measures for the great army of California's adult blind are now being prepared for submisison to the state legislature which convenes next January, it was learned recently. Success of the bill providing aid for crippled children at the 1927 session is taken to augur well for the new aid-for-the-blind program. The greatest statewide movement in history is under way to ascertain the type of legislation most needed, according to Mrs. Anna L. Saylor, director of the department of social welfare.

The United States government has made an appropriation of about $190,000 yearly for experiments on behalf of forest conservation in California. This national assistance comes through the passage of the McNary-McSweeney Forest Research bill, in the House of Representatives last week. President Coolidge is expected to sign the bill, as he has already "clear listed" it. Officials of the California Development Association are jubilant over this victory which they have worked hard to secure. The federal endowment is made to this organization, and is the seal of approval of the activities undertaken and carried out by the California Development Association and the State Chamber of Commerce.

Beginning of a state wide campaign to secure a narcotic isolation farm in California was announced in San Francisco last week. The Narcotic Research Association, a state-wide organization, will direct the campaign. The object of the association is to gain the approval of the Legislature for an appropriation large enough to establish a farm on a scale to accommodate 1,500 addicts. Either an island or a desert will be urged as a site, it was announced. The time has come, directors of the association declared in an official statement, to change the policy "of trying to legislate and control by police measures drug addiction, which is primarily a medical question."

If private Capital is called in to finanace California's proposed $358,000,000 water development program, franchises and contracts affecting construction of the various power and irrigation dams must safeguard the interests of ultimate public ownership at all times. That attitude was plainly reflected by Alexander R. Heron, director of finance and state administration leader, in a statement declaring that sale of power is conceded to be the most logical means of paying for suggested units in the statewide water plan. The elaborate series of reservoirs, canals and pumping plants brought to the attention of the last legislature for greater storage and distribution of California water resources is being studied by the legislative water committee.

With the addition of thirteen more men who were sent out from San Quentin to prison road camps last week, the total number in the various camps is now 428. With the exception of four years ago, this is the largest number of men who have been in the prison road camps in the history of the penitentiary. It is planned to increase the number to approximately 1,000 before the summer is over, and this will greatly alleviate the present congested condition within the prison walls. The total number of inmates, both men and women, is now 4,321, the largest number ever recorded.

Evolution of the contents of a doughboy's mess kit from beans and "corn willy" in 1918 to chicken, peaches, shredded cocoanut and assorted preserves a decade later was revealed by Adjutant General R. E. Mittelstaedt. The general announced that when his 5,000 California National Guardsmen gather this summer for their annual training encampment program he will greet them with 800 pounds of fresh chicken, 30,000 pounds of fresh beef, 2,000 pounds of frankfurters and very little corned beef. The old mess kit will actually contain catsup, Worcestershire sauce and assorted jellies.

Nurses who administer anaesthetics to patients either in California hospitals or physicians' offices are violating the State law. The Board of Medical Examiners so declared a few days ago and announced passage of a resolution warning all medical practitioners against sanctioning activities of "lay anaesthetists."

The State of California has purchased 4,533 homes and 244 farms for veterans of the World War under the State home and farm purchase act, George M. Stout, secretary of the Veterans' Welfare Board reported. The total cost of homes purchased is $21,321,186,80. Thus the total amount expended May 1, 1926 (not including escrows) was $22,568,849.84.

Police activities on the Pacific Coast have reduced auto thefts to such an extent that there is but one known organized gang of thieves operating in the coastal States. And this gang, which is said to operate in the southern part of the State, will soon be rounded up and its members sent to jail. Such was the optimistic report made at the annual convention of National Automobile Theft Bureau.

California's total estimated daily average crude oil production increased 9,100 barrels during the week ended May 19, figures released by the American Petroleum Institute show. The total estimated crude oil production for the week aggregated 632,000 barrels, compared with 622,900 barrels for the week ended May 12.

Collection of $7,441,416.05 in state gasoline taxes for the first quarter of the year was announced a few days ago by State Controller Roy L. Riley. Of the total levy for the three months, one third of which goes for new highway construction and the balance for state and county road maintenance work, only $16,541.54 is delinquent.

Platinum ore worth $50,000 a ton, said to be virtually the first reported in California, is claimed to have been found in Trinity county by A. A. Cooper, according to an announcement by the Department of Mines and Mining. Sacramento Chamber of Commerce. The department quoted Cooper as stating he believes the deposit contains platinum worth several million dollars.

Finger prints for all automobile drivers, photographs on all operators licenses and State vehicle registration numbers stamped into the back of all horseless carriages. These innovations, as a means of reducing automobile thefts and assuring immediate identification of motorists, were recommended to state authorities last week by Sergeant R. H. Plaice of the Salinas police department.

California is making giant strides to the front in aviation progress, according to a report issued by state corporation commission. During the last 18 months, according to the report, twenty-five permits have been approved by this department for the promotion of companies to engage in air transport or the construction of airplane motors and bodies. These permits represent permission for issuance of more than $50,000,000 in securities, the report pointed out, all of which has been invested in California.

Miss Ann Morrison, 23-year-old handwriting expert of the State Bureau of Criminal Identification, has stepped up to the "mike," 4,985 times during the last ten months. "Mike" meaning microscope, friends of newspaper land. Ann has broadcast the accurate identity of 239 forgers of anonymous letters and other criminals. And she has examined specimens of handwriting through which the public was bilked out of approximately $500,000. She has cleared up an average of five crimes with every handwriting identification, making a grand total of 1,195 since last July."

California had "money to burn" last week, and State Treasurer Charles G. Johnson actually burned $8,000,000 worth. The million dollar conflagration involved the $8,000,000 bond issue authorized in 1919 to reclaim San Francisco-San Joaquin drainage district No. 6. Sale of the bonds was held up several times by court orders or other protests and cancellation was finally provided for under a new reclamation financing plan approved by the last Legislature. And Treasurer Johnson personally applied the match to $8,000,000 in the State Capitol furnace room.

There is no legal limit on short skirts, bare legs or other dress fads of California high school flappers so long as they don't interfere with "the orderly procedure of school." William John Cooper, state superintendent of public instruction, so declared last week when advised of new outbreaks on the "no-stockings" vogue and reports from Yuba City that high school girls there have appeared at school after "shellacking" their bare limbs with a dark liquid to resemble sheer hose. The schools exist for educational purposes, and local school boards can take action to alter the garb of students only when the dress styles interrupt the regular educational program, Cooper said.

More than 500 California produce dealers have received state licenses and posted $2,500,000 in surety bonds under the terms of the 1927 commission merchant act designed to protect the agricultural industry from the manipulations of unscupulous operators, it was announced recently by State Agricultural Director George H. Hecke. Los Angeles leads with 140 licensed produce dealers and San Francisco is second with 110. Each dealer is required to post a $5,000 bond.

The successful use of a gigantic parachute in bringing a powerless airplane safely to earth, which was accomplished at Tracy, San Joaquin county, last week, was hailed in aviation circles as a device which finally means "absolute safety" for passenger aircraft. The device, invented by Charles Vroderick of San Francisco, consists of one parachute seventy-two feet in diameter and capable of sustaining an air plane, and a small 'chute which acts as a pilot for the larger one.

FARM POULTRY

MODERN CHICKEN MUCH IMPROVED

When you sit down to your breakfast eggs or your Sunday chicken dinner nowadays you will probably enjoy much better food than you did seven years ago. For while few of us know anything of the change, the great American hen has become a decidedly improved bird since 1921.

Thousands of poultrymen in more than half of the states of the Union have adopted standard systems for improving the breeds and eradicating disease in their flocks since Wisconsin began producing "accredited" chicks seven years ago.

"The basis of the Wisconsin plan," explains the Farm Journal, "was a breeding program whereby through culling, selection of birds of standard qualifications and vigorous constitutions, with supervision of both flock and hatcheries, high-quality flocks and chicks might be produced. The chicks thus produced were designated as "accredited" and were advertised and sold as such.

"This accredited idea spread rapidly from Wisconsin and is now in operation under essentially the Wisconsin plan in Ohio, Illinois, Kansas, Missouri, Michigan, Texas, Tennessee and a number of other states. Some eight or ten more states are also preparing to put this plan into operation.

"In 1922, Connecticut adopted the Wisconsin idea, but made the blood test for bacillary white diarrhea the basis upon which flocks were to be accredited. Following the lead of Connecticut, Massachusetts, Rhode Island, New Jersey, Pennsylvania and a number of other Eastern states have built up an accredited system based on the disease-eradication plan. Washington, Oregon and Idaho are now on, or are adopting, this plan. New York has a plan that is a modification of this, with more emphasis on breeding."

Success of the plan is evidenced by the fact that Ohio, where the state poultrymen's association adopted the plan only in 1924, will this year produce 12,000,000 chicks from 65 accredited hatcheries.

Hot Water Very Useful in Preventing Chilling

If there is anything more aggravating than an old "mother" hen that refuses to hover her brood on cold, wet days, I don't know what it is, says a writer in Farm Life. But you know a dead chick more or less means nothing in life to an old Cluck, so it's up to us to give nature a lift in the way of artificial heat, when the hen refuses to do her duty.

Here's my way. Fill one-half or one gallon jugs with hot water, make a snug cover of woolen (an old blanket is ideal) to fit the jug, cork tightly, and place in a box or in the coop with the chicks. This will give off enough heat to keep the little things cozy for several hours. When necessary refill with hot water and you'll never lose chicks from chilling.

Poultry Notes

Comfortable quarters in the very earliest days means much in the future development of the chicks and the profit which they will return to their owners.

• • •

Young chicks should have no feed for 36 or even 48 hours after hatching. Corn bread, rolled oats, and hard-boiled eggs are good feeds for the first few days.

• • •

It takes 21 days for a hen egg to hatch, about 28 days for ducks, from 30 to 34 days for a goose egg, and 28 days for turkey eggs. The time may vary somewhat according to conditions.

• • •

The all-mash system of feeding chicks after the first month furnishes a satisfactory method and also allows the person handling the flock some leisure time without damaging the young birds.

• • •

Ground oats may be used for growing stock or laying hens when fed in limited quantities.

• • •

Wheat bran is largely used in all chick mashes. It is bulky but fairly digestible and has a laxative tendency which is beneficial. It is fairly high in protein.

• • •

Chicks need something green to eat. When they are out on good range they will take care of this requirement themselves. When they are housed it should be supplied.

• • •

In the building or maintaining of a high quality flock of poultry, no one factor is as important as the males heading the flock.

• • •

Buckwheat is lower in feeding value than corn, oats, or barley. Further more, it is higher in fiber and lower in digestibility than these grains.

• • •

When bluegrass is pastured too closely by geese, it will kill the grass out just the same as it will if bluegrass is pastured excessively close by cattle, or particularly by sheep.

• • •

Minerals are of great importance. It has been proved that pure limestone, bone meal and charcoal are beneficial. In chick mashes 10 per cent of these minerals are used during early weeks.

• • •

Poultry parasites are of many kinds. Sometimes they multiply until they kill the fowls on which they prey. But they do even greater injury to the industry by reducing the vitality, stunting the growth, and checking the egg yield of fowls.

CALIFORNIAN SURE OF NOMINATION

IT IS NOW ONLY A SHORT TIME when the Kansas City Republican convention meets to nominate a candidate for the presidency. From present indications Herbert Hoover will be that nominee. He will secure the coveted prize on the first ballot. His nomination means his election, although his hardy opponent-to-be, Al Smith of New York, will put up a stiff fight. When the votes are counted next November it will be seen that Herbert Hoover of California will have won the prize and will be the next occupant of the White House. He is well equipped mentally and by a vast experience to make a splendid executive, one that California is going to be proud of and one that the nation will acclaim with enthusiasm. Mr. Hoover is a hard headed business man with positive ideas and courage to carry them out. With Hoover in the White House the people of the country will feel safe from worry for he will conduct the ship of state in peaceful waters, free from entanglements which means prosperity and happiness to the country.

MIDDLE - AGED MEN

THE ACTION MEMBERSHIP ASSOCIATION of New York, formed for the purpose of finding jobs for unemployed middle-aged men, has been given up as a failure. With 1400 applications, the manager said, the Association was able to place only 200.

Some years ago a wave of popular indignation swept over the country because of alleged black-lists that certain corporations were supposed to have. Denials and apologies, charges and counter charges were hurled back and forth for a number of years. If such lists really existed they were driven under cover, and were offered no public defense.

But here is a black list, in fact, and all but universal. The middle-aged man is on the black list of every employer. He can get a job only after all the young men are taken. If his hair be white, he can apply in vain, even though he be the last man.

This is not due to man's inhumanity to man. It is business, business under wrong conditions. High speculative rents and heavy taxes on production have made competition so fierce that only youth can stand the pace. Besides, even though the man of fifty have health and strength, his pace will soon slacken, and he will have to be set adrift without a pension; whereas, the young man will have served thirty or forty years before quitting, and will have earned a pension.

The standard of living in this country is probably higher than elsewhere. We are thankful for that much. But an economic system that does not provide a job for the middle-aged man—and even for the white-haired man—is not good enough. We must make it better.

There is an enormous amount of money invested in vacant land, city and farming land. As vacant land it is not employing a man, young, middle-aged, or white-haired.

There is also a lot of money invested in business, in farming, factories, stores, and all manner of industries. This money furnishes employment.

If there is to be enough employment to take in the middle-aged man and the man past middle-age, there must be more active capital engaged in business, and less money devoted to speculation.

In the pre-Volstead days the government discriminated between desirable and undesirable business by laying heavier taxes on the latter. The building, fixtures and goods of a saloon and a grocery were taxed alike, but a heavy special tax was laid on the saloon.

Why not a special tax, or a higher rate, on the business of the land speculator that employs no labor, and a lighter tax on the productive industries that furnish the jobs that keep society going?

STATE BURNS WARRANTS

(By Capitol News Bureau)

SACRAMENTO, May 31—California had an eight million dollar fire this week, but no one was excited. State Treasurer Charles G. Johnson started the blaze but refrained from calling the fire department.

Under order from the State Reclamation Board authorizing cancellation of $8,000,000 drainage district warrants for work in Sacramento-San Joaquin Drainage District No. 6, Johnson fed the warrants to the capitol furnace.

Following an injunction suit in 1919 by land owners the reclamation work was financed through other financial channels without recourse to sale of the warrants.

State Drug Act To Be Enforced

SACRAMENTO, May 31—"Sing me to sleep" may be sung to one's sweetie without fear of legal intervention, providing the beloved one is not a nurse, or a drugless practitioner. If, however, your sweetheaart falls in either classification, it's a violation of law for her to put you to sleep.

Only physicians or surgeons licensed under the state medical practice act and dentists licensed under the state dental law have the right to administer anaesthetics, it seems, and the State Board of Medical Examiners today issued warning that violators of the law will be vigorously prosecuted.

HUGE SUMS SPENT FOR REDUCTION OF CRIME

$87,930.28 Spent Yearly In San Mateo County

CRIME ON INCREASE

Other Protective Service Cost State Fortune

By LAWRENCE MONFORT
Staff Correspondent Times-Gazette

SACRAMENTO—May 31—Joining the trend of states to erect common barriers against the criminal, California counties are spending in excess of $12,000,000 annually for protection of persons and property, it was announced today by Clarence Morrill, superintendent of the State Bureau of Criminal Identification.

San Mateo County, a survey of inancial transactions for the past fiscal year reveals, is spending $87,930.28 yearly in combatting crime or for the protection of property, the two activities in most as s following a dual course to a single end that citizens may be protected against murder and the thief or those persons whose crimina negligence reaps an appalling harvest of lives or property loss in the course of a year.

Of this amount the county last year spent $42,168.16 for crime prevention, including salaries of sheriff, deputies and constables and jail maintenance; $2467.50 for public inspection services; $5,746.34 for agricultural supervision; $3,414.87 for fire prevention and nearly $9,000 in other safety and prevention outlays.

Crime is costing the nation more than ten billion dollars annually Morrill revealed, both for law enforcement and in damage to property, while in the past decade gunmen have murdered more than wice as many citizens than the number of Amercans who lost their lives overseas in the World war.

And, Morrill's records shows, the crime toll is increasing rapidly in California. During the fiscal year ending June 30, 1927, only 31,874 dossiers of criminals reached the bureau while in the first ten months o fthe present fiscal year, records of 44,759 persons have been received. The increase in crime by juvenile males has been particularly appalling, the ten months since last June 30, showing records doceted for 6530 boys as compared with only 3525 youths for the preceding fiscal period.

An encouraging circumstance, however, is that delinquency among girls appears to be on the tobaggan, for with 308 dossiers of girls received in the last fiscal year, the succeedinkg ten montns have brought but 46 black marks against the female juvenile delinquents, Morrill declared.

Bad check writing appears to be on the increase, 4985 cases having come to the attention of the bureau since June.

The 58 counties of state spent $3,619,,829.17 in the last fiscal year for prevention of crimes of violence, this sum being divided between salaries of sheriffs, deputies, constables and other peace officers, and in the maintenance of county jails and inmates. Maintenance of courts, including salaries of judges and attaches, while not included in this total was easily another two and one-half millions dollars.

County Recorders, whose services are a protection of property, eceived in excess of $1,399,000; public administrators drew $34,934; inspection of livestock, bees, oil wells, administration of the weights and measures act and similar services cost the counties $338,307.28 and horticultural commissioners and farm advisors salaries and expenses rolled up an additional $1,249,88 .

Forest fire protection, on a county basis, cost $646,202; compensation insurance $245,846, and an additional approximate of $2,000,000 was spent on other services and capital outlays.

Many New Features Shown in Model

This year's outstanding motor car, the new Graham-Paige, is being displayed here for the first timetime today at The Dumbarton Garage, newly-appointed Graham-Paige dealer.

The new Graham-Paige is the result of the fusion of the three Graham brothers' twentyfive years of exeprience with the experience and organization of the Paige Co., which has manufactured automobiles since 1909. Ray A. Graham, one of the brothers says:

"We believe we have succeeded in producing a line of cars, in five models and five prices, which represent the fruition of our ideas of what the public wants, and our ideas of substantial values in motor cars. On the Indianapolis Speedway, and in various mountainous sections throughout the country, these new cars have been run in competiton with the foremost cars of America. This final testing period has occupied practically all of the time of our experimental department for the past six months. We are completely satisfied with the performance of our line. We believe the performance of the Graham-Paige car, running smoothly and effortlessly, will meet the most exacting demands of the American motorist.'

Sepaking of the new modes, Mr. Lindquist says: "The four speed transmission, with which the Graham-Paige organization has had extensive experience and excellent results, is made available now in cars of smaller size. All models of the Graham-Paige line with the excepton of the 110½ inch six are equipped with this transmission.

The speed changes are so arranged that shifting is done as in the conventional three-speed trans mission, the low gear being latched out for use only in emergency. In fourth speed the crankshaft of the motor revolves less often for each wheel revolution, therefore higher road speeds may be maintained in comfort, hgher fuel and oil mileage result, and cooling is made easier with this four-speed transmission.

"Beauty, always a mark of the Paige cars, is also a characteristic of the Graham-Paige models. The Graham-Paige shield, designed by the studio of Lorado Taft, more than any one other feature symbolizes this beauty. The whole shield has been modelled in graceful contour in keeping with the peasing lines and smart color schemes of the ine. The native bronze from which the emblems have been struck will grow more lustrous in tone with polishing and weathering. One of these emblems will grace the radiator front of every Graham-Paige car, from the smal six to the big eight."

On Sunday, June 3rd, the Affiliated Improvement Clubs of this city will give the first of their annual picnics. The picnic will be held at Emerald Lake. The Affil-

...TO, May 29— The ...an no longer has a ...er learning. ...orny-handed son of ...ot only as the high-...iture but also as the ...trial leader. ...ducational trend in California is described today by John C. Bostwick, chief of the State Bureau of Trade and Industrial Education.

In the course of training the hand and the head to work together for more efficency in industry, Boswick is making education a business assess to the state.

Believing not only in the Lincoln slogan that "educated people must labor, otherwise education will become a positive and intolerable evil," but also that laboring peope must be educated, this practical instructor has brought the schools to the factory and workshop.

"The industrial training program of California is a tangible commercial attraction in bringing big industries into this state," Beswick declared. "Trained workers are essential as shipping facilities or raw materials.

"Business executives inquire about labor conditions befort locating," Beswick said: "For instance, the excellent industrial work being done at the Marin County Junior College was a consideration recently attracting a big manufacturing plant to Marin county.

"Three big concerns, each investing millions in development in Los Angeles, inquired about training workers and if they would receive co-operation from schools, before they located," the state educator annoonced.

"Not only is industry benefitted by having our teachers go into its shops and give scientific instruction," Beswick said, "but also the boy and girl is benefitted by having a chance to practice the chemical or technical theory he has learned.

"This combination of work and teaching has salvaged a tremendous waste in human lives, as well as saved waste in industry," the trade educator asserted. "Where formerly a boy trained to be a chemist for long years without knowning how he would like practical commericial chemistry, now he learns as he earns, and if he finds he would rather be a carpenter, he switches before he has spent years and money to become a misfit."

Under this state program with the assistance of federal funds, not only city boys but country boys are delving into trades.

The high school boys of Roseville are being taught in railroad shops how to repair the great "iron horses" which drag train loads over the Sierras. In Stockton high school lads are turning out harvesters in a local factory, under the direction of a skilled and learned mechanic.

In Oakland it is not "the house that Jack built" which interests students, but one built, painted and even plumbed by the high school boys.

"We have received the fullest co-operation from business leaders in every line, from both the employers and from labor leaders," Beswick declared. "We follow largely the law of trade and aim to supply labor demands."

How To Get Sick And Stay Sick

By G. W. GOLER, M. D.
Health Officer, City of Rochester
New York

Most of us are well born. To get a bad start in life and keep it, it is necessary to follow most of the rules laid down here.

Let us begin with the baby. The mother should employ a doctor who advises feeding the seven-pound baby with one stomach on the milk of a broad-faced animal who makes milk for a seventy-pound baby with four stomachs, and then let the mother watch for baby and see how its nice "new interior soon becomes darkened with perplexity." Even pasteurized milk will help.

To help the baby get sick, keep it away from the light. Cover it with so much clothing, and smother it so in a feather bed that it soon sweats itself into a cold. Let it suck its thumb and pry its face out of line, and if it has diseased tonsils and adenoids that you keep in, it will grow up to look as if it had a hot potato in its mouth. Avoid giving it water if you want it to stay sick and, if you wish to destroy its mental make-up handle it, rock it, make faces at it, make it afraid in the dark, and then, when it protests say "fraid cat." If you want it to make it sick in mind, when you and the other grown-ups have tantrums, have them before the baby and it will get tantrums too. If you want further to destroy its mind, keep it from associating with other children as it grows older, so that, when it goes into the big world, it will be sick and lonesome. It won't know anyone, nor will it be able to get acquainted.

Don't give the baby anything until it cries for it. When it grows bigger and is ready for school, always take it to school, and then the other children will make it feel good by making "Mama's baby."

To help it get sick and stay sick shut all the windows at night. Of course, keep out the night air until you can get day air at night. Never feed it anything but meat and potatoes, pie and pudding. If you want it to stay sick, avoid giving it vegetables, fruits, kidney, liver and sweetbreads. Bathe it once a week until it has reached the age of fourteen years and until, if a boy, he begins to ask, "Mama, are my ears clean?"

If you do most of these things, you will have a boy or girl grown up to be a man or woman who will have a face out of line, decayed teeth, catarrhal colds, diseased tonsils and adenoids, bronchial cough, one that will be burden to himself and will make life a burden to most of the people, with whom he comes in contact. Get sick and stay sick by doing these things.

Enemies Within Hit By Education Speaker

(By Capitol News Bureau)

SACRAMENTO, May 31—The minister who stirs religious descension, the lyncher, the prohibition law violator and the person who exploits the public for selfish ends today were branded by Director of Education William John Cooper as "enemies of the Republic."

Cooper's attack was directed in connection with a call to teachers to conduct impressive Memorial Day services to the end that patriotism and sacrifice of "those who espoused their country's welfare as the peril of their lives" shall in the memory of school children.

"These enemies are not armies in uniform, carrying weapons openly. Nevertheless they are the forces of disintegration which will slowly but surely undermine our government unless put to route by real American education," declared Cooper.

New Rabies Causes State Warning Notice

(By Capitol News Bureau)

SACRAMENTO, May 31 Warning to owners of animals, especially in rural districts to be on guard against rabies, 51 cases of which have been reported in the state within the last month, was issued today by Dr. Walter M. Dickie, director of public health. Control of dogs means control of the disease, the health mentor declared.

Exploding some popular theories, Dr. Dickie said rabies generally is more prevalent in winter than in the hot months; that mad dogs do not always foam at the mouth and that an increase of saliva from the dog's mouth is not always discernible and that rabid dogs do not always fear water.

Restlessness and change of tone of the dog's bark are first symptoms of the disease, said Dr. Dickie in advising owners to keep dogs restrained.

New Ruling Affects State Water Rights

(By Capitol News Bureau)

SACRAMENTO, May 31—Ruling that water once used by power companies is "new," California in a far-reaching decision has aspower generation water surplus-serted her right to re-allocate age or to appropriate it for the state's own use.

"Released storage water is new and foreign at the time of its release and does not belong to the natural regimen of the stream and is subject to appropriation by new users and not subject to priorities of former appropriators on the same river, Harold Conkling, chief of the division of water rights ruled.

The ruling was made in granting a permit to the Waterford Irrigation district for 100 cubic feet of waste from the Hetch Hetchy power projected oprated by San Francisco over the protest of the Modesto and Turlock Irrigation Districts and other prior appropriators claiming surplus waters of the Tuolumne River and its water shed.

SYNOPSIS

On a certain Monday morning Miss Constance Fuller, seller of rare books at Darrow's Bookshop, New York, notices that the first customer is a dignified old gentleman, who saunters into the alcove placarded "Medical Works." Peter Burton, one of the employees, amazes Constance by telling her he paid $510 at auction for an old law book containing a Colfax bookplate. Suddenly a girl's shriek of "Murder!" rings out. The elderly customer is on the floor unconscious, with his right wrist slashed. Just before the shrieking girl falls in a faint, she calls out to Peter: "Keep it! Keep it for me!" Peter's sister, Nancy, began that morning working at Darrow's. Nancy tells Constance of her elopement with Brandon Tower, an elopement which was cut short when Tower attempted to make off with Nancy's suitcase. Constance explains Darrow's card-index system to Captain Ashland, a nephew of Mr. Darrow's. They examine the book Peter paid $510 for and find the bookplate to be a forgery. Constance is asked to assist Detective Almy in his investigation of the murder of the elderly gentleman. The girl who fainted, Julia Grosvenor, turns out to be his granddaughter. She can throw no light on the mystery.

"It seems that she was the only child of his younger daughter Mary, who has been long dead. With the name or whereabouts of her father, she was never acquainted by any one. She tells me her grandfather would never mention either of her parents. He seems to have had an unreasoning grudge against the girl, which is partially explained by what I can learn of his character. On this point, and on the old gentleman's antecedents, Mr. Henry Ballard has been of some service to us. Mr. Ballard says Mr. Grosvenor never mentioned his granddaughter except once. That occasion was just after the girl had finished her artistic studies in Italy, where she had been for several years learning stained-glass designing, and had come back here to live. Mr. Ballard, knowing his client's health to be rather precarious, made some suggestion to him in regard to making proper provision for the girl in case of his death. This Mr. Grosvenor wholly declined to do. He told Mr. Ballard that his grandson Charles MacIvor, the son of his elder daughter—he had just the two children—was his only legitimate heir, and he had no wish but to see the whole estate go to him."

"It's a wonder he acknowledged his granddaughter at all if he wouldn't do anything for her," said I.

"As a matter of fact," Mr. Almy reminded me, "he did a number of things for her; more than plenty of people with his disposition and traditions would have done, Mr. Ballard himself admitted. He had her educated properly, her artistic gift was developed, he gave her the protection of a home. The truth was, Miss Fuller, that this Mr. Charles Grosvenor was an unusually proud man. His father bought that fine Normandy terrace house in what was a century ago, a very exclusive neighborhood, having come to live here about 1830, though a Virginian by birth. The little Mr. Ballard and I can learn about him tells us that he was a distinguished physician; he was especially known for his ability in handling yellow-fever epidemics. Now, Mr. Charles Grosvenor, Mr. Ballard says, was full of typical southern family pride, but it was called on to suffer so many crushing blows that he became embittered, and, indeed, practically a recluse."

"I think I understand," I observed, as Mr. Almy paused a moment. "His younger daughter was the mother of this unwelcome child, and as he had no son, the family name ended; you say his grandson is named MacIvor. That must have been indeed a terrible blow for such a man as you describe Mr. Grosvenor to have been. His wife is not living, I suppose?"

"No, she died, unfortunately, while he was still quite a young man. He outlived all his immediate family. His elder daughter, Charles MacIvor's mother, died a few years ago, after a disastrous marriage which ended in a divorce. Indeed, the whole family history is tragic, and deepens the mystery surrounding Mr. Grosvenor. He had no intimates but his grandson who was a great favorite with him."

"And he didn't live in New York I understand?"

"No, his residence was Richmond; actually, however, he spent a good deal of time here, making his home in Normandy terrace. We've found out from his cousin that he sailed for Buenos Aires on Saturday; he's been intending for some time to enter business there. We sent a radio to the liner; but have had no reply as yet."

"Then Miss Grosvenor is alone? A difficult situation for her!"

"I'm afraid her situation has always been difficult. Until about this time she would have been too young, and too dependent upon her grandfather to show resentment at his ignoring her as he did or to oppose him; especially as she is an extraordinarily reticent and delicate sort of girl."

I was becoming interested.

"You've talked with her?" I suggested.

"Yes. She seems to me the most solitary human being I've ever met. All the family she has now, at the age of twenty, consists of one cousin who is out of the country. Her grandfather sent her away to boarding-school for years, and the young people she knew there, of course, are scattered. Then she went to Italy to study for three years, and came back eight months ago, so that practically all the friends she has now are mere business acquaintances."

"Oh, I think that looks as if she had been intentionally cut off from other people: don't you?" I demanded. Even taking such pride as Mr. Grosvenor's into account, he must have realized that she was blameless in that matter, and in all other respects apparently a credit to him. Then, from your description, he was the exact type of old-fashioned man who invariably objects to having any woman connected with him work or enter a profession, and, however badly he treated her, he did acknowledge her as his granddaughter. Oh, I'll never believe that such a total lack of sympathy with her during his life, and a decision to leave her stranded at his death wasn't due to some powerful motive!"

"Feminine intuition, maybe; certainly not pure reason!" commented Mr. Almy, who had heard me out, however. "Well, it might be of the greatest value to find out what the motive was, if it existed. The truth is, that Miss Grosvenor, on her side, had evidently no high regard for her grandfather. She has said nothing whatever against him, but it is evident that she very bitterly resented the way he treated her, and furthermore, this long-pent-up resentment seems to have burst out violently last Sunday afternoon. She does not know this yet, but she and her grandfather were then overheard quarreling bitterly."

"Oh, dear!" I faltered. "About what? I suppose somebody listened?"

"Somebody did; but unfortunately his command of English was not equal to the situation. All he can definitely state is that the quarrel apparently concerned some book. He heard the word 'book' over and over again, and sticks to his story; though a book might seem a strange object of violent dispute between an old man and a young girl."

I managed to give no sign of the fact that that word "book" had made my heart stop short for a second, and then make up six beats at once; nor of the fact that it had spurred me to great eagerness for the proposed visit where I had previously felt only reluctance. I inquired:

"Shall I ask Miss Grosvenor any thing special this afternoon?"

"No. Let her talk, rather than get her to talk. Don't under any circumstances press her. She was told you took care of her when she fainted here; her reason for asking you to visit her is to thank you for your attention. She asked for you before I told her you were working with me in an attempt to clear up the mystery about her grandfather's death."

"If the invitation still stands, then," said I, thoughtfully, "I can at least go on from there."

So a few hours later I passed between the box-trees flanking Number 14 Normandy terrace; and there in the hall, as he had a right to be, was Ernesto.

"Do you know if Miss Grosvenor's in?" I asked. "I've been sent from Darrow's to see her on business."

"Yes, she's in," responded Ernesto, hesitantly.

"Well, I think she'll see me."

"You could try. She don't see anybody but that old fellow—lawyer; he came once—and police."

"She's not all alone here, I hope."

"Her housekeeper sleeps here, now My wife, she's been to see her, but the young lady don't talk. She don't know many people, see?" Ernesto again hesitated discreetly, but a chance to talk was too much temptation. "That old fellow, her grandfather, he didn't treat her so good."

I appeared amazed.

"She worked hard, didn't she?" I suggested.

"Sure! And she is beautiful young lady, and the old fellow's rich. But he don't give the money to her."

"Kept it, did he?"

"Yeah-h-h! And he gives it to the young fellow. You know—grandson." Ernesto here bestowed on me a wink of an utterly classic description, which I officially ignored, but readily interpreted to mean that Mr. Charles MacIvor was a good and versatile spender of the ancestral cash. With dignity I ventured on the remark that it was unfortunate that Miss Grosvenor's cousin should be unavailable at this critical time.

"Bah-h-h! He's not so good she couldn't do without him! I know him; he's all the time here. She likes him pretty good, I'm sorry. The old fellow liked him real good. He says he's in the wooden business, too, but I say he's in . . . what you call . . . teis covering me up with my cape. You were bending over, and didn't see me look at you. I fainted again immediately."

"No, I didn't know that until now," I said, trying to show no surprise.

"I told no one. Miss Fuller—" her voice sank—"did you notice my slippers?"

There was nothing to do but meet her directness.

"Yes," I answered point-blank. "I said nothing about them, though. I thought you could explain them yourself at the right time, if, indeed, it should ever be necessary."

She looked at me with evident gratitude, and said not one single word.

"I suppose you know," I resumed "that Mr. Almy wants me to help him clear up the mystery of your grandfather's death. I am an entirely unofficial assistant, but I do wish, Miss Grosvenor, that it lay in my power to do something to help you."

"I'm under great obligation to you already for your attention to me when I was so ill," she said cordially; "but I'm afraid I can't even help myself much. I couldn't even tell Mr. Almy if my grandfather had any enemies. If there was any reason for an attack to be made on him. Indeed, I haven't really been very clear in my mind as to what I saw at the time I found him in Darrow's on Monday morning. I thought perhaps, however, if I could talk with you, knowing you were there at the time, that you might help me recall part of what I fail to remember."

"That's a good idea," said I, looking at her keenly, and remembering what Peter had said to Mr. Almy about his impression that Julia Grosvennor had lost track of her surroundings when he encountered her in the aisle. "I suppose," I hazarded, "the shock you suffered robbed you temporarily of your memory to some slight extent. Nothing unusual about that."

"I shouldn't wonder," she agreed. "Well, to begin at the beginning, you know my grandfather collected literature about Virginia? He had a big collection, gathered just in the last few years, too. Last Sunday we saw in the paper that Darrow's had bought a number of Virginia books from Judge Leavitt's famous library, and I planned at once to see if any of these would interest my grandfather. So on Monday I went to Darrow's. As I am not familiar with the shop, I spent a good deal of time, perhaps more than I realized, searching for the books in those many alcoves. Finally I found some of the Leavitt books in the history section, and I followed the shelf on which they stood, around into the next alcove, and—"

She broke off a minute, her lips trembling.

"And there in front of me," she finally continued, "lying on the floor, I saw my grandfather! His right wrist was cut, blood was spurting out of it. I remember turning, running into the aisle, and stumbling, and then, they say, I screamed for help. I don't remember doing so, or anything else, except that one instant I saw you, until I found myself in the hospital. Mr. Almy thought maybe you could help me fill up some of the gaps."

They were certainly numerous enough. Miss Grosvenor had given no definite idea of how she had occupied her time in Darrow's; she had made no allusion to the difference she had had with her grandfather. And I frankly doubted that she was telling the truth when she intimated she had no recollection whatever of seeing Peter, as of course, her narrative implied. I resolved to find out.

"And There in Front of Me, Lying on the Floor, I Saw My Grandfather."

detail, though only about ten inches high, and I thought must be very useful to its owner, if she were as fine a sewer as she was an artist. And then a door opened, and she came into that strange, formal, bright-colored room, a sharp setting for a somber, arresting personality.

Julia Grosvenor was in black, as I had seen her before; her face was still perfectly white; but now self-possession characterized her bearing. She came forward with a certain grace despite her limp on the right foot, which I should of course have expected, but which, for some reason, surprised me for an instant. Through my mind unaccountably shot that sentence from Daisy Abbott's story:

"After Miss Grosvenor stopped short, she stumbled."

"How do you do?" She touched my hand, and sat down on the long blue sofa opposite me. "I am glad to see you . . . again."

Her voice had that clear ringing note I had heard before. I said:

"Oh, yes, you've seen me at my desk."

"I meant," she rejoined very directly, "that I saw you when you were taking care of me last Monday. I came to one instant when you were

Lilac Always Blossom of Love and Lovers

The lilac is an oriental blossom coming to us originally by way of Turkey and Spain. It is supposed to be the flower of love and lovers, marking the heyday of spring. The lovelore of the "laylock," to give it an Old-world name is varied and pleasant. A spray of white lilac, buried on the eve of a May moon, is a midland charm which maidens practiced believing that by the time the lilac died they would have the heart of the man they desired. If as many lilac petals as composed the name of a lover were strung on triple threads of white silk, and worn in a little bag next to the heart, before next lilac time came the lover would be won by this secret charm. If you have lilac in your garden no ghost can enter your house; if white lilac grows beside your door you will never be without love and luck; if you pluck a spray of lilac without your lover's knowledge when walking with him, put one of its petals in his drink; if he swallows it, he is yours forever and a day. A "luck lilac," usually found on white lilac, has five divisions of the petal instead of four. If you are in love, look for a luck lilac, swallow it, and your loved one will be faithful for all time! Thus love and lilac are irrevocably related.

Auk Probably Extinct

The auk was a marine bird belonging to the same family as the razorbills, guillemots, and puffins. The great auk was at one time a frequent visitor to the Orkneys and the Hebrides islands off the coast of northern Scotland and Iceland, but no living specimen has been seen for sixty years and the bird is believed to be extinct. The egg was as large as that of a swan. It is now highly prized and as much as $1,500 has been paid for a single egg.

Student of Farm Life

Margie had often seen cows in the pasture and had had the process of supply and demand, as pertaining to dairy products, explained to her by her mother. However, personal contact with the gentler species of the cow had not been her privilege. On a recent visit to the farm, she was taken to the barn just at milking time.

On her return to the house her mother asked her what she saw in the barnyard, expecting her to list the different animals.

Her reply came: "Well, mother, I saw them squirt the cow."

How to Prepare Swiss Steak

(Prepared by the United States Department of Agriculture.)

Round or rump steak has a very fine flavor, but it needs to be cooked in a way that will make the meat tender without destroying the taste. One way of doing this is to cook what is often called "swiss steak." The secret of this is that flour is pounded into the meat, softening the muscles somewhat and at the same time providing material for thickening the gravy so that the juices of the meat do not cook out. Tomato juice is cooked with the meat and penetrates it, combining with the flavor of the meat itself to make an unusually good dish. The recipe below is from the bureau of home economics.

Swiss Steak.

4 pounds round or rump steak about 3 inches thick
3 tbs. fat
½ cup flour
1½ tsp. salt
2½ cups of tomato juice and pulp, or hot water

Sift the flour and salt together and beat into the steak with a meat pounder or hammer. Melt the fat in a large, heavy iron skillet, and sear the meat well on both sides in the hot fat. Pour the tomato juice and pulp or the water over the meat, cover tightly, and let cook slowly for one and one-half hours, or until the meat is so tender that it can be cut with a fork. Add more liquid from time to time if needed to keep the meat covered. There should be plenty of rich gravy to serve over the meat.

Onions may be added if liked, and should be browned and cooked with the meat.

Boiled macaroni or noodles may be used for the starchy vegetable to serve with swiss steak. When the meat is nearly done the cooked macaroni or

INTERESTING as a sidelight upon the two-year football agreement between West Point and Illinois is a luncheon that was given in New York to a group of illustrious football coaches last winter when the National Football Coaches association was holding its annual meeting.

Between Captain Biff Jones, the Army coach, and Dr. J. W. Wilce, the Ohio State coach, sat Robert Zuppke of Illinois. Talk among the three centered upon methods of instruction and football generally when Zuppke, apropos of some remark concerning the relative merits of the elevens of the last season, said abruptly in his resonant Teutonic manner:

"Well, of course, so far as you two are concerned, Illinois could beat Ohio State and the Army in one afternoon any time." Neither Wilce nor Jones made reply; neither had any idea what sort of reply could be made. Later Jones got Wilce aside.

"Was Zuppke kidding, or what?" he asked.

Wilce shrugged his shoulders. He didn't know. It is pretty hard to tell when Robert is spoofing and when he is not.

Well, anyway, he will have his chance in 1929 and 1930 so far as the Army is concerned and right here it might be set forth that of all the engagements that Army has made in its expansive mood following the Navy break, the Illinois assignments are likely to be the toughest.

Although his fielding was said to be much better than his hitting ability, it has been Chalmers Cissell's batting in the early weeks of the major league race that has created attention.

* * *

Josh Billings, bespectacled Tiger hurler, threatens to become one of the sensations of the majors this season. His showing is all the more remarkable since he was a collegian a year ago.

* * *

George Dauss, the grand old right-hander who served the Tigers for so many years, is said to be through with baseball. Dauss, who is on the retired list, is now recuperating from a nervous breakdown.

* * *

From the time he became active in major league baseball in 1915, Babe Ruth has appeared in 1,496 games and he has been walked 1,214 times, or exactly 20 miles and 1,640 yards. The home-run king knows every first baseman in the league.

Paul Hopkins, twenty-two-year-old pitcher, obtained by the Nationals from Albany of the Eastern league, has been sent to the Montreal club of the International league with option to recall.

Connie Mack Satisfied His Ball Club Is Good

"Our ball club is all right. I have no excuses to offer for the team," says Connie Mack, whose Athletics once more seem to be trying to win back the appellation recently taken from them—to wit: The White Elephants. "I have gotten together the best ball club I could lay my hands on," declares Connie. "We've invested a lot of money, bought players where we could find the ones we thought could help us, and I'm satisfied our club is a good one. It can hit and field and that is all any of them can do.

"Our trouble has been with our pitching. I thought we were going to get off with better pitching this year, but the way they've gone it looks as if they are just as bad as they were last spring. My only hope is that I can get them into shape earlier this season than last.

"But we aren't quitting. No one hates it more than the players themselves when they are losing, and no one feels it more keenly than I do. Some day, I don't care how soon, we'll start winning. The race has only started. We are going to keep on trying and fighting."

Ty Cobb Thought Babe Was Doctoring Balls

Here's a yarn Ruth tells on Ty Cobb:

"Billy Evans was umpiring and on my first pitch Billy called for the ball and threw it out.

"'That one sailed a foot,' Billy said. The next pitch was a strike and Cobb called for the ball.

"'He's doctoring he ball,' Ty complained. "That one sailed 18 inches.' Billy threw it out. I threw the next ball, and they both squawked, and that one was tossed out, too. All told I pitched six balls to Ty on that one turn at bat. And after each pitch Evans tossed the ball out of the game.

"On the sixth pitch, Ty struck out. Boy, maybe you think he wasn't sore. He walked past me when the inning was over. 'You're cheating out there, you big bum,' he said. 'No one can make a ball sail like that unless he's doctoring it. But I'll find out about it, and when I do I'll run you out of the league.'

"As a matter of fact, I wasn't cheating. I was just as puzzled as Ty. And to this day I don't know what made those balls sail so. It was just one of those things."

Max West Retained

The Brooklyn club, by retaining Max West, and sending him to Atlanta for the 1928 season, has a pretty expensive minor leaguer on its hands, but Manager Wilbert Robinson believes Max will come through and be worth it. The deal with Waco was that if West was not returned by May 1, an additional sum of $13,500 should be paid for his contract. Brooklyn has notified Waco that the payment will be made. When Brooklyn made the deal with Waco for West it did not figure on getting Rube Bressler and Al Tyson.

Sculler in Olympics

Popular Dutch Stamps

All the popular sports are represented on a set of special "Dutch Olympic" postage stamps. The one portraying a boxer is of the largest denomination. The new stamps are: 1½ cents, dark green, showing the figure of an oarsman; 2 cents, violet, a fencer; 3 cents, light green, a football player; 5 cents, light blue, a sailing yacht; 7½ cents, orange, a weight putter; 10 cents, red, a runner; 15 cents, dark blue, a horseman, and 30 cents, brown, a boxer.

MILTON GASTON HAS FORK BALL

So Extreme That Backstop Cannot Hold Onto It.

There is such a thing as getting too much on the ball.

Milton Gaston illustrates the point. He has a fork ball that is reputed to be the best of its kind baseball has known.

But the fork ball is so good that it really counts against Gaston, writes H. G. Salinger in the Detroit News.

It is so extreme that he cannot use it effectively.

While Gaston was on the pay roll of the St. Louis Browns he was pitching in a game against the New York Yankees. They filled bases with none out.

Gaston cut loose with the "forker." The ball broke over the plate but it broke so sharply that it got away from Hargrave, who was catching.

When Hargrave recovered the ball, in front of the grandstand, New York had two men on bases and one strike on the batter.

Gaston delivered another fork ball. This one also broke over the plate but got away from Hargrave. When he recovered it New York had one man on the bases and two strikes on the batter.

Hargrave asked for time, walked to the pitcher's box and said to Gaston:

"Say, Bill, don't you think you and I could get along just as well today without using that forker again?"

Gaston resorted to the fast ball, omitted the work ball, and retired the next three batters.

No delivery is good unless it can be handled by the catcher.

No catcher has ever successfully handled Gaston's fork ball.

When it breaks no catcher can guess what direction it will take.

The ball may break down, in or out.

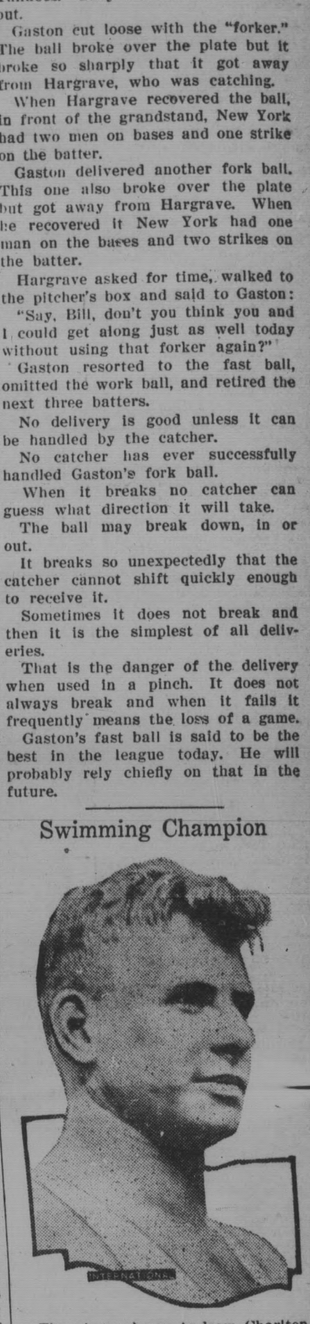
It breaks so unexpectedly that the catcher cannot shift quickly enough to receive it.

Sometimes it does not break and then it is the simplest of all deliveries.

That is the danger of the delivery when used in a pinch. It does not always break and when it fails it frequently means the loss of a game.

Gaston's fast ball is said to be the best in the league today. He will probably rely chiefly on that in the future.

Swimming Champion



The photo shows Andrew Charlton, Australia's swimming champion, who will make a big effort to beat Arne Borg in the 1,500 meters swim at Amsterdam. He is also a 400 meters aspirant and hopes to defeat Johnny Weismuller in this event. His best time for 400 yards is 4 minutes 59 4-5 seconds.

Laugh at Lightning

New York.—The next time the lightning flashes and baby cries and mother shivers and you swallow hard and tell Johnny, "Pooh, pooh, there is nothing to be afraid of," and then duck your own head under the bed clothes—don't. You are right. There is nothing to be afraid of. The chance of a person being struck in his home is one in several million.

And if you chance to be at your desk in some downtown skyscraper, the lightning cannot reach you.

You have the assurance for this from R. M. Spurck, an engineer of the new switchgear plant of the General Electric company at Philadelphia, in charge of the high voltage testing of circuit breakers, where arcs of artificial lightning at from fifteen to twenty feet are played over apparatus to make sure there are no defects and that it will withstand conditions when put into service out in the open in natural lightning areas.

Not Mere Guesswork.

"Shooting a million volts into circuit breakers to thoroughly test them before leaving the factory is not mere guesswork. The fundamentals are based on studies made in the company's laboratories, field observations, and the classic work of the late Doctor Steinmetz," Mr. Spurck said.

If you reside on the top of a hill with no trees about, you are in a comparatively perilous position. But if you live in the average city home with houses of equal height about you, lightning is likely to single you out about once every thousand years. As for the residents in the house perched upon the hill, the chance is one in several million that they will be struck by the bolt that comes once every hundred years.

The bolt might tear up the roof, or even set it afire, but likely would get no closer to you. It would encounter the electric house wiring and would be carried impotent to the ground. Or it would hop on to the plumbing system and docilely speed off into the earth.

Keep Away From Walls.

The safest place in your house is anywhere except where these lightning conductors are centered. Most plumbing and heating pipes run up and down in the middle of the house. Keep away from the walls in which they run. Do not stand between two metal objects, such as a heating radiator and the plumbing pipes. There is nothing wrong with the superstition that the bed is a safe place.

In the modern steel office building lightning can't even get the roof. Most roofs of such buildings are metal and are purposely brought in contact at some point with the steel framework, and this circuit absorbs and carries off any lightning that may chance to shoot down.

Perhaps the question of the efficacy of lightning rods has never been fully settled in the public mind. Lightning rods are now to be seen chiefly in the country. There is a lightning rod on nearly every house in the cities, though it may not be visible to the eye. Every plumbing system has an air vent—a pipe—that runs upward to, if not through the roof. It serves exactly as does the lightning rod which pricks the air on the farmer's house.

Leave the Green Isle for America

Thousands of young Irish boys and girls are leaving Ireland every week with the enlargement of the American immigration quota. In one week 1,700 enthusiastic emigrants, such as are shown here, departed from Queenstown. This picture was taken as a shipload of emigrants sailed.

Sea Monsters Taken With Hook and Line

Sportsmen at Keala, Hawaii, are enjoying themselves catching sharks with hook and line. They are big brutes—gray-blue in color—14, 13 and 12 feet in length. One escaped with a steel hook and 3 feet of log chain which was being used as a leader. Others escaped by straightening out steel hooks ⅞ of an inch in diameter. One female shark was caught whose body contained 85 unborn young about 8 inches in length. All the sharks caught were hooked from the beach, surf fishing. A coral reef lies a short distance offshore at Waipouli. There is a hanging-out place for sharks near the reef. Fishermen strew spoiled salmon on the surface and bait their hooks with horseflesh. The 14-foot shark was caught and held by seven men from shore. They were losing ground when seven men came to help them. They pulled the shark into shallow water where another man shot it in the head. As the blood spurted four feet away from the wound other sharks crowded into the fray. But the dead shark was drawn out before they could eat or tear into the body.

Colonists Must Be Fit

Colonists who take advantage of the offer of a new colonization company in Argentina will be chosen according to their physical fitness and ability to overcome pioneering difficulties. The project is to be tested with the opening of 40 farms of about 25 acres each. On each farm will be a comfortable house, a well, a pump for drinking water, shade trees and necessary tools for working the land. Advances will be made on the purchase of horses, cows, chickens and feed. Payments for the farms are to be made over a period of 30 years. Other similar projects may be opened later.

Karl Marx's House

The house in Treves, in the Rhineland, where Karl Marx was born on May 5, 1818, and where the "father of scientific socialism" spent the years of his youth, was recently bought by the national executive committee of the Social Democratic party of Germany. Berlin papers say that the Socialists will preserve the house as a sort of monument to Marx. Marx died in exile in London in 1883.

Skating Pattern in Dream

That one of his most successful ice patterns came to him in a dream, was recently revealed by Sidney Charlton, who claims the world's trick skating championship. While in Switzerland he dreamed that he was skating before a large crowd who seemed to applaud all out of proportion to his act. When he looked on the ice he found that he had drawn with his skates a perfect pattern of a sunflower. The surprise awakened him and he jumped out of bed to jot down the turns, which he found next day to be practicable.

Threw Shoes at Preacher

The sermon of the dean of Peterborough at the cathedral in Peterborough, England, praising the flapper's stern qualities, displeased an elderly woman worshiper. She first protested against the dean's eulogy of the modern girl, but when she found out that her protests went unheeded, she removed both of her shoes and flung them at the dean, then she took off her hat and threw it at the head of the "offensive" preacher.

On the Other Side of the World

By THOMAS ARKLE CLARK
Dean of Men, University of Illinois.

I HAVE always thought that things would be very different on the other side of the world—different customs, a different language, different peoples. The South Sea islands have always spelled mystery and magic to me and dusky forms waving strange weapons in the air. India and the Malay peninsula I was sure was another world.

My cousin Tracy, who is a banker with nothing to do on occasion but to sail the seas and to stop at strange and unfamiliar parts has been going around the world recently, an experience which is new neither to him nor to his much traveled wife. He sends me a bundle of newspapers from Singapore. Of course you all know what and where Singapore is. I do, since I asked Nancy, and she, to be certain, looked it up in the Atlas. It is an English possession, I believe, where the papers advertise "snappy bathing costumes" at from nine to fifteen dollars each—dollars, mind you; good American dollars, not pounds, shillings, and pence.

They marry and murder in Singapore the same as we do in this civilized and enlightened country. They advertise motor cars and whisky (without an e) for Mr. Volstead's influence has not traveled so far. They have moving pictures, and just at the time when Tracy was there, Andy and Min and Chester Gump were holding the boards. Think of little Chester doing his stuff in Singapore! It seems inconceivable to me. They have political outrages there, and men are shot in a manner very similar to the way in which our own unscrupulous politicians are done away with.

They seem to have the same motor cars, the same lubricating oils, the same rubber tires, the same varieties of ice cream and typewriters in Singapore as in Kankakee, Ill. It rather surprised me. There are military training schools and pacifists, and tennis clubs, and football associations, and all sorts of sports and sportsmen in Singapore as there are in our own cities. The other side of the world does not seem so different from the side with which we are acquainted as one might suppose.

They dance after dinner at the fashionable hotels, they use safety razors and eat Quaker oats, and take patent medicines for rheumatism, and use alarm clocks to rouse the lethargic from their morning sleep, and they sit through plays which depict the antics of college students the same as we do in our own undergraduate-filled towns.

In fact the thing which impresses me as I read the Singapore Free Press is that on the other side of the world things go on much as they do in these middle western American towns of ours. People play the same games, eat and drink the same food, with only slight modifications, and in the main follow the same daily routine and think the same thoughts.

History in Wampum

Albany, N. Y.—Four almost priceless belts of Indian wampum recently added to the collection in the New York state museum make it one of the finest groups of these "historical documents" in the world.

The belts were left to the museum by the will of Anna Treadwell Thacher, whose husband, John Boyd Thacher, purchased them in 1893 for $500.

The four new belts in the collection are known as the Hiawatha belt, the Washington Covenant belt, the Wampum to Mark the First Sight of Palefaces, and the famous Champlain belt.

The Hiawatha belt is believed here to be the original record of the formation of the Iroquois league. The exact age of the belt is unknown, but it is believed to have been made in the middle of the Sixteenth century.

The Washington Covenant belt was the one most highly prized by the wampum keepers of the Onondaga nation. It derives its name from its use during the Presidency of George Washington as a covenant of peace between the thirteen original states which he represented and the six nations of the Iroquois, the great Indian federation.

The third belt was made by the Iroquois to commemorate the "sight of the first palefaces," but it is not known whether this reference is to Spaniards, French or Dutch.

The Champlain belt is virtually a duplicate of the Gen. Ely S. Parker belt, also a part of the collection. It commemorates the excursion of Samuel Champlain into the country of the Iroquois in 1609.

DIPPING INTO SCIENCE

Millions of Insects

There are between five and ten million species of insects in the world. Many of these are very necessary to us. Some help in destroying the harmful insects, others give us valuable medicine, and others still more useful carry the pollen from plant to plant, enabling them to bear their fruit and flowers.

Russian Girls in Japan Get Licenses as Geishas

Tokyo.—All geisha girls in Japan are not Japanese. There are at least six Russian geisha maidens, all with blond hair and red cheeks, entertaining the tired business men of Kobe, Osaka and Nagasaki. Now there is one in Tokyo who has adopted the professional name of "Helen Doran."

Miss Doran appeared at metropolitan police headquarters recently and made an application for a geisha license. The invasion of foreign girl entertainers is not encouraged by the authorities, so the young Russian candidate was given a rigid examination in her knowledge of the Japanese language and ability to strum the shamisen. She qualified in every particular and the license was given.

She told the police she had been born in Moscow and brought up in Harbin, where she earned her living as a cabaret dancer. It was in that "wickedest city" of the Far East that she began learning Japanese. Subsequently she came to Japan and completed her study of the language.

SUCH IS LIFE —— No Hurry Whatever —— By Charles Sughroe

German Amber Town

Palmnicken, Germany.—With frost out of the ground, quarrying for amber has started again at the great Prussian amber mining works here which is the only plant of its kind in the world.

Palmnicken lives on amber. The whole village of 800 people is employed in the plant.

Amber, "Prussian gold," was traded at this little spot on the Baltic coast with the ancient Phoenicians. Fishermen dredged for it in earlier days, but more recently it has been dug out of the blue clay with machinery.

Great hoppers bring up cars of clay from an area a square mile in extent. The clay is washed for amber in much the same way as auriferous earth is washed for gold. Each season about 3,000,000 cubic meters of soil are moved.

Amber is found in clusters. The pieces are picked out and washed with sand in great revolving drums. An army of girls sits at a running band and picks out six recognized standard qualities.

Every year the "crop" runs to about 125,000 pounds but only one-third of this is suitable for beads and ornaments. The rest is ground to powder to make "pressed" amber, or melted down to make varnish and colophony. Amber oil and acid are by-products obtained by distillation.

Pieces of seven or eight pounds weight are not rare, but the biggest single lump ever found here weighed about fifteen pounds.

In the laboratory, pieces of amber of all shades and sizes are kept—bright amber, pale-yellow amber, plain and with flies, bugs or tiny leaves imbedded in them, dating from the tertiary period when coniferous forests flourished here in a subtropical climate.

The most valuable amber bears the quaint name of "sauerkraut" because it is of a pale-yellow tinge and has markings suggesting strands of cut cabbage.

Just What They Are Looking For

Government Is Asked to Alter Girls' Dress

Rome.—Bare arms, low necks and short skirts would be taboo for Italian high school and college girls if Minister of Education Fedele took the action asked in a letter now before him.

The body known as "the national committee for the correctness of the mode" has petitioned him requesting that all those whose costume "does not conform to that modesty which is dictated by civilized Christian usage and sentiment" be barred from the institutions under his control. The school supervisors in several large provincial cities have already publicly admonished girl students for "immodest dress,"" but with little effect.

German Waiters Again Will Work in England

Berlin.—German waiters are to work in English hotels and restaurants again for the first time since the war. Four German waiters have left Germany for England and others soon will follow them.

According to German estimates, more than 40 per cent of all employees in English hotels and restaurants before the war were Germans.

The Neue Berliner Zeitung states that the first group of German waiters to resume work in England and who have just departed, have been engaged for a period of five years at wages between $30 and $35 a week—far more than they could earn in Germany.

IN BLACK TAFFETA

Myrna Loy proves her talent for designing by this simple yet beautiful dinner frock of black pussy-willow taffeta with overdress of black dotted lace, showing the uneven hemline. MENLO PARK

Leave Today for Europe

Fred Paletti and his charming wife will leave today for their old home in Tyrol in the Alps to spend six months viewing once again the scenes of their youthful dreams. Mr. Paletti has been employed on the estate of Mrs. William Cluff for the past seven years and this is the first time he has taken a vacation which he has well earned by long and faithful service. His friends wish him and his wife a pleasant trip and a safe return to Menlo Park, the land of flowers and sunshine.

McClymont Estate Sold

The McClymont estate on Oak Grove avenue has been sold to Attorney White of San Francisco, a brother of Mr. White of the firm of Shearer and White, the strawberry growers of Atherton. The famous estate will be kept in tact by the new owner and will not be subdivided. Although the property is located in the City of Menlo Park it is not included in its limits, neither is it in Atherton. It is situated in "No Man's Land," being a part of the Third Township of San Mateo county. The estate is one of the oldest in this lorality and for nearly thirty-five years was the home of the late E. W. Hopkins, a nephew of the late Mark Hopkins, one of the builders of the Central Pacific railroad. The estate consists of seventeen acres. It was laid out in the sixties. Prior to the ownership by Hopkins it was the dwelling lace of Michael Castle, the tea importer of San Francisco, who entertaned royalty there in other days.

Purchases Cook Property

E. J. McLaughlin, the widely-known shoe dealer and politician, has purchased the Mrs. Ina Cook property on Mills avenue. He is engaged in improving the dwelling preparatory to occupying it. The late Miss Ina Coolbright, California's gifted poet, spent many happy days in the old home, finding there inspiration for her best poems. She was an aunt of Mrs. Cook, to whom the aged poetess left the bulk of her vast fortune.

Death of Mrs. Bridget Vrang

The death of Mrs. Bridget Vrang at San Rafael last Monday at the age of 77 years recalls her residence here forty years ago. Her marriage to Mr. Vrang in the eighties was quite a social event. At that time he was the superintendent of the Macdonough estates at Atherton, later the Barney place and now subdivided into small tracts. Mrs. Macdonwas a sister of J. O'Brien, one of the famous Bonanza Kings, and in those days she spent money lavishly. She and her sister, Mrs. Coleman, inherited their brother's millions. Vrang was the major domo of the estate and was well known to all pioneers. He passed away some years ago. The deceased was a sister of the late Mary Ward and up until the latter's death often visited here.

Death of Mrs. E. J. McEvoy

Following a lingering illness, Mrs. E. J. McEvoy, wife of the late Frank J. McEvoy, passed away in San Francisco last Saturday. Mrs. McEvoy was a pioneer of Menlo Park, having come here nearly forty years ago and later going with the family to Palo Alto where she resided until recently, when she went to live with her daughter at Atherton. Mrs. McEvoy was a talented musician, for years giving piano lessons to large classes, both here and at Palo Alto Many of her pupils have become well-known entertainers and musicians.

In the early days of Stanford she played for dances and entertainments on the campus and also for parties at Palo Alto and Menlo Park. She loved music and gave freely of her talent to worthy causes which made her many friends on the peninsula. Mrs. McEvoy was a native of San Francisco, but spent the greater portion of her useful life in this locality. Her family were old pioneers of San Francisco, having come there during the gold rush, and were prominent in the business world. The deceased is survived by three daughters, Mrs. Mary L. Eddy, Mrs. Ethel Whipple and Mrs. Gladys E. Brown.

Sullivan Cottage Purchased

Frederick Sinfield, the local taxi man, has urchased from J. H. Sullivan a cottage on Walnut avenue, Atherton, for $3,000. The sale was made by W. E. Monroe. He is also negotiating the sale of the Ahlert plumbing shop property on Oak Grove avenue.

Mrs. Andrews Enjoying Vacation

Mrs. Nancy Andrews, the popular deputy county clerk, is enjoying her vacation in the cooling shades of Monte Rio with friends from Redwood City. On her return she will occupy her beautiful new home in Menlo Park.

Father Deneaf, assistant pastor of the Halfmoon Bay Catholic church, was here on Tuesday greeting old friends. The father is well known on the peninsula, having been the chaplain of the Eight Division of the U. S. army at Camp Fremont during the World war. He had been a chaplain in the army for fifteen years. He went to France, going to the front with Uncle Sam's soldiers comforting and giving them spiritual consolation in battle.

Four Busses Daily to Oakland

But few residents of Menlo Park are aware that four Peerless Stage busses arrive here from Oakland four times a day, two in the mornng and two in the afternoon. The busses come over the Dumbarton bridge up Willow road to Palo Alto, thence to Menlo Park and over the Ringwood road to Centerville, where transfers are made to Oakland. The fare from here is only fifty cents. Many are taking the trip to enjoy the scenic beauty of the route.

Hundreds Visit Cemetery

Hundreds visited Holy Cross cemetery on Wednesday, all speaking highly of the appearance of the burial grounds. It never looked better or freer from weeds and dry grass. Thanks to the energies of George B. Walsh who collected funds to beautify the last resting place of the departed.

Clear Away Weeds and Dry Grass

The Board of Fire Commissioners, through their secretary, Miss M. E. Kugeler, has notified all property owners to clear away all dry grass, stubble, brush and other inflammable material from their lands adjacent to buildings. Failure to comply with the request may bring a severe penalty. All property owners should co-operate with the commissioners and have their vacant property cleared of all dry grass, thus removing dangerous fire hazard.
